CLD MISSION STATEMENT

The Council for Learning Disabilities (CLD), an international organization composed of professionals who represent diverse disciplines, is committed to enhancing the education and quality of life for individuals with learning disabilities across the life span. CLD accomplishes this by promoting and disseminating evidence-based research and practice related to the education of individuals with learning disabilities. In addition, CLD fosters (a) collaboration among professionals; (b) development of leaders in the field; and (c) advocacy for policies that support individuals with learning disabilities at local, state, and national levels.

SESSION TOPICS

The Council for Learning Disabilities' International Conference on Learning Disabilities will focus on the education of persons with learning disabilities (LD) from birth through adulthood. Students with LD are a heterogeneous population with a range of characteristics that can impact academic achievement, psychological processes (e.g., memory and self-regulation), and social/emotional development. All proposals must align to the CLD Mission Statement and address one of the following topic areas.

Assessment:

Proposals for Assessment sessions should clearly describe the theoretical underpinnings and research base for an assessment practice. Information about the reliability and validity of the featured assessments should be reported. Assessments may include those used for eligibility purposes or those used to inform instruction.

Assessment for Eligibility

Assessment for Eligibility sessions focus on factors that lead the field to a better understanding of the construct of LD and how to more accurately and efficiently identify students with LD who require special education services. Proposals addressing the multi-disciplinary nature of LD diagnosis, disproportionate representation of subgroups of students, and/or nondiscriminatory assessment practices are encouraged.

Instructional Assessment

Instructional Assessment sessions provide participants with information that will facilitate implementation of an assessment used to inform instruction (including progress monitoring). Proposals should include a brief summary of how the assessment promotes data-based instructional decision making for students with LD or those suspected of having LD.

Intervention Practices:

Proposals for Intervention Practices sessions should either present information from original intervention research, or content on how to implement an evidence-based practice for students with LD.

Original Research

Original Research sessions disseminate findings from intervention research with individuals with LD, including (a) a brief summary of the theoretical underpinnings and existing research foundation for the intervention, (b) a description of the research methods employed (e.g., participants, measurement, procedures), and (c) results that demonstrate the effectiveness of the instructional or behavioral intervention.

Translating Research-to-Practice

Translating Research-to-Practice sessions provide evidence for the efficacy of a practice and provide strategies to participants that help them implement the practice with students with LD. Presenters should clearly delineate for whom the intervention would be beneficial (e.g., students with mild vs. severe reading disability) and the intensity of the intervention needed to provide effects.

Higher Education:

Proposals for Higher Education sessions should focus on topics related to either teacher preparation or how to enhance the skills of novice researchers.

Teacher Preparation

Teacher Preparation sessions describe evidence-based practices for preparing teachers to work with individuals with LD, their advocates, and their families. This might include a description of teacher preparation practices, examples of their use in a university or clinic setting, and data establishing their effectiveness. Topics related to contemporary issues in teacher preparation, new instructional approaches or models for professional development, or ways to measure effectiveness of teacher preparation programs are encouraged.

Developing Research Skills

Developing Research Skills sessions target novice researchers and are intended to advance knowledge in the area of research methodology in the field of learning disabilities. Topics might include (a) how to read and/or synthesize research-based articles, (b) how to form and effectively collaborate within a research team, (c) how to design and conduct rigorous research that provides evidence for interventions, or (d) strategies for effectively reporting research findings.

Legislation, Litigation, and Policy:

Proposals for Legislation, Litigation, and Policy sessions should address impact of regulations on the educational services for individuals with LD and the professionals who serve them at the local, state, and federal levels. Presentations that would be relevant to leaders at the individual school level are appropriate as well. Topics that relate to delivery of services for individuals with LD are encouraged.

TYPES OF SESSIONS

A description of each session type is provided below. Each session should include opportunities for participants to ask questions. Important Note: Proposals not adhering to the restrictions related to number of presenters will not be reviewed or considered for acceptance.

Panel

For either panel option below, multiple people will submit one proposal. The organizing theme must be aligned with the CLD mission statement and one of the designated conference topics.

Option 1: A single central theme is selected and multiple panelists with expertise in the selected topic discuss various viewpoints within the field. This panel option is required to consist of a minimum of three panelists. Recommended: It is recommended that the panel identify a panelist to serve as a presider or discussant for the session.

Option 2: Several studies are identified related to the same general topic; authors of those papers comprise the panel. This panel option is required to consist of at least three papers. A minimum of three speakers across all of the papers is required. A single study with multiple authors is not appropriate for this session type.

Roundtable

Roundtable sessions are small-group, informal discussions on an issue aligned with the CLD mission statement and related to one of the designated session topics. A maximum of five presenters are allowed for this session type. However, it is strongly recommended that no more than two presenters sit at the table to facilitate the interactive discussion during each rotation, because allowing more than two presenters at a time to sit at the round table restricts the number of attendees that can participate in the session.

Multiple roundtable presentations will be offered in the roundtable session room. Within the 1.5-hour session, there will be two 45-minute sessions at each table, allowing attendees to join two different discussions during the session.

Interactive Paper (Poster)

Interactive Paper sessions are designed for presenters to display a poster of their work and discuss the content with participants. The work should be aligned to the CLD mission statement and related to one of the designated session topics. The presenters should plan to include both written and graphic information on their poster. A maximum of five presenters are allowed for this session type. However, it is strongly recommended that a maximum of three presenters stand near the poster at any given time, because allowing more than three presenters at a time to stand near the poster restricts the number of attendees that can participate in the session.

Posters will be displayed in a large poster hall. Within a 1.5-hour poster block, there will be two 40-minute rotations. Throughout the session, attendees will interact with presenters for brief periods of time in order to visit as many posters as possible. Important Note: Some posters may be selected by the program chair for presentation in an alternate format: a structured poster session. This type of session is 1.5 hours and contains 6-10 posters clustered around content within a similar theme. At the beginning of the session, one presenter for each poster provides an overview of their work to help attendees determine which posters to approach. Then, time is allotted for attendees to view individual posters of their choice and speak with the presenters. Finally, at the end of the session, presenters participate in a question and answer period to answer audience questions and generate a group discussion.

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

General Policies

1. The Program Committee seeks presentations that are evidence-based and timely with sound empirical and theoretical support. Proposals promoting commercial products, including books, will not be reviewed. Similarly, proposals unrelated to the mission and vision of CLD will not be considered.
2. An individual can be listed as a Session Leader only once. An individual may be included as a co-presenter on a maximum of 3 additional proposals. Proposals not adhering to the restrictions related to number of presenters will not be reviewed or considered for acceptance.
3. Proposals submitted after the deadline will NOT be considered.
4. Presenters (including both the Session Leader and all Co-presenters) are required to register for the conference by the speaker registration deadline – 06/15/2019.
5. Some proposals may be wait-listed. This means that the session reviewers ranked the proposal as meeting criteria, but the proposal has not been accepted because of space availability. If other sessions are cancelled, wait-listed proposals will move into cancelled time slots as they become available. If a session is wait-listed, we will notify the Session Leader as soon as possible if cancellations occur.
